

Warren-Pohl Conservation Reservation Opens

The Chelmsford Conservation Commission is pleased to announce the opening of the Warren-Pohl Conservation Reservation for public access. The property is located at 95 Boston Road, less than a half-mile from Chelmsford center.

The town acquired the property in 2020 through use of the Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds in the Open Space Preservation category. The Warren and Pohl families owned the property since 1699. They wanted the town to have the opportunity to permanently protect this open space for all to enjoy. The CPA funding enabled the acquisition, after a unanimous vote at a special Town Meeting in 2020.

The site now has driveway access and parking for public use. The Department of Public Works has done a fabulous job getting the site ready for visitors. There are well-maintained trails through fifty-four acres of beautiful woodlands, fields and meadows. This amazing property is a nature lover's paradise.

We will continue to maintain and improve the site, including trail improvements and signage, an invasive plant management program, and incorporation of site historical and educational information displays.

The Conservation Land Use regulations apply to Warren-Pohl Conservation Reservation. The site is open from sunrise to sunset.

For further information, please contact the Chelmsford Conservation Commission or the Town Conservation agent, David Koonce @ DKoonce@chelmsfordma.gov